#3.

These two pieces are showing a tension with each other. One form is on top of the other reaching high. The other struggles with the weight and has trouble fully expressing itself. Within the pieces there are forces of contraction and expansion.

I have chosen this site as this is a point along the path where the flow of the walk is interrupted by the choice to go in another direction. The sculpture reflects this subtle inner conflict and duelling. This grassed site is also a potential plaza area involving community activity and even sports activities. Sports also contains within it the dynamics of duality, opposition and winning which the qualities of this sculpture express.
